Purpose of Data Collection

Vercel is a frontend cloud that offers tools, workflows, and infrastructure products for customers to build, deploy, and scale their websites and applications ("Services"). In order to provide our Services, we collect personal information from our website visitors and customers and their respective website users or applicable visitors ("End User"). We process, transfer, and store such information outside of the European Economic Area. Vercel processes its website visitors', customers' and their End Users' personal information ("Non-HR data"), such as name, email address, phone number, and IP address. We process Non-HR data to provide, operate, deliver, monitor, administer, improve, and maintain our Services, provide assistance and technical support, and communicate with customers for account administration, marketing activities, security and legal purposes. In addition, Vercel may process personal information from event attendees and website visitors for marketing, user experience, or analytics purposes in connection with our business development efforts. We may disclose Non-HR data to our customers, partners, event sponsors, third-party service providers, corporate affiliates, and legal and public authorities, and as otherwise required by law. Vercel processes employee and job applicant personal information ("HR Data"), such as contact and identity information, employment and business relationship information, benefits, financial information, and internal engagement and preferences information. We process HR Data to facilitate and maintain a working relationship with our employees, including communications, maintaining employment records and claims, conducting performance management efforts, complying with legal, insurance, financial, and audit obligations, managing workforce benefits and travel expenses, and maintain security, health, safety, and administrative programs, and for other legitimate interest purposes. Vercel discloses HR Data to our corporate affiliates, third-party service providers, and legal and public authorities, and as otherwise required by law.
